

C.T.L. Electronics Inc.

C.T.L. Electronics Inc. has been established since 1968 providing technical services to many institutions and individuals in New York, Nationally and Internationally including World Class Museums, Individual Artists, Private Art Collectors, and Corporate Art Collections, Broadcast Networks, Universities and Hospitals and Government Institutions.

C.T.L. Electronics' highly skilled electronic technicians and new-media art restorers specialize in maintaining and repairing analog television and video equipment and specifically vintage audio-visual equipment and CRT monitors and televisions. The C.T.L. Electronics team has extensive experience working with museums on video art installations and multiple-monitor video installations, for maintenance and restoration of high-end new media artworks.

In addition to the maintenance and restoration of CRT and new media based art works, some of C.T.L. Electronics expertise include refurbishment of video projectors and video playback equipment, modifying and/or redesigning audio/video facilities; construction and installation of networked audio-video installations, trouble shooting and problem solving new or existing systems; system integration analyzing audio/video problems; general trouble shooting, restoration of vintage audio-visual equipment, server back- up and custom hardware and software server replication and repair, tape and film transfer to digital media, and the resale of new and vintage equipment.

Since 1968 C.T.L. Electronics pioneered some of the initial technology which ushered in the age of non-broadcast video. They were one of the first corporations to offer equipment and guidance to the new users of the new medium, including businesses, artists, and home enthusiasts. The industry has changed vastly, of course, since its initial days, but C.T.L. has been there every step of the way, participating in a wide spectrum of video uses and technologies.
